

She Travelled 9090 Kilometers to Teach Malaysians How to Dance

Hi folks. As always, we hope you have been keeping well and busy. We at Leaderonomics can never say no to a good human interest story, and we hope the same goes for you. We bring you Andrea Zsapka, who some of you may know as 'Miss Dancewithmeasia'. We first got to know her when she offered to run a dance workshop at our 2020 MAD Youth Summit.

It turns out she is also a personal branding coach who walks the talk - she had emigrated from Hungary years ago and had to build her reputation and network from scratch. Talk about stepping out of your comfort zone! Today, she is one of the 100 Most Inspirational LinkedIn Icons In Malaysia.

Read all about her inspiring journey and her tips for us to begin building our own personal brand. We suppose it's natural that people from Hungary want to come to Malaysia, as we have such delicious food. Get it? Cause they're hung-ary?

Too bad she didn't use Uber

"Deliberate practice is the key."

- TM Nagarajan of The Renaissance Group

Do you have something you wish you were more skilled at? Are you secretly envious of others who seem to be naturally talented at it? And most of all, do you feel like throttling the next person who assures you that you just need to just keep trying?

Truth be told, they're not far off, according to entrepreneur and avid mountain climber TM Nagarajan. It's not just about how many hours of practice you put in - it's how many hours of deliberate practice, where you identify strengths and weaknesses and target them.

Home Is Where the Heart Is

Welcome Home, a show for parents anywhere, everywhere. Check out our podcast series that aims to explore the heartful interaction between parents and their children, Home hopes to aid fathers and mothers as they navigate the realities of raising future leaders.

Podcast Series: Raising Young Leaders

Home may not have all the answers but gain insights from teachers, lecturers, and experts in the field of psychology that'll help you in your parenting journey. So what are waiting for, come back home!

Listen to the Podcast →

.....